Look what others are saying about her book ... a great tool for every center library

"Shauna's welcoming style of writing invites young women into the living room of a safe place and gives counsel in both a loving and truth-telling way. Learning to Live Happily Ever After is a needed book that will be both a trusted friend and a wise counselor to the young woman seeking to live by God's standards."

- Linda J. Cochrane, R.N., Author of Forgiven and Set Free, Executive Director of Hopeline Women's Center, and Co-Founder of PACE

"Fantastic! A conversational journey down the path to freedom. Shauna, thank you for courageously and correctly reminding young women of the biblical boundaries so often overlooked in our present culture. I only hope my son's future wife reads and embraces all that is found here."

- Rick Howerton, Senior Pastor of The Bridge Church and National Director of Events & Training for Serendipity by LifeWay

"This book is without question one of the most exciting books I have ever read for young women! It's a 'must' for every home library where there are successful women in the making. It will greatly encourage and bless its readers by giving them courage and practical tools for living victoriously for Jesus in this pleasure seeking society. Shauna has penned this book with an infectious love for God and a desire for others to experience Him in everyday living. She has revealed God's loving plan for every young woman – regardless of her background or history – in Learning to Live Happily Ever After."

- Jim Jackson, President of Christian Believers United

"The next generation needs the honest and transparent truth found in this book. Learning to Live Happily Ever After will impact the teens in your life and in doing so change yours."

- Tammy Maltby, Co-Host for Emmy Award Winning Television Show Aspiring Women and Author of Confessions of a Good Christian Girl
